Joe Stephenson, CIFI, CSMIE

Joe Stephenson, CIFI, CSMIE, is the Director of Digital Intelligence for INTERTEL, Inc. and an internationally recognized expert in the field of Social Media and Open Source Intelligence (OSINT). With over 30 years' of investigative experience in both the private and public sectors, Joe spearheads the development of innovative products for fraud detection and analytics, particularly those that draw from Social Media, Deep Web, and IoT data. Joe is currently the 2nd VP for the Northeast Chapter of IAATI, and a former Board of Director for IASIU, and past President of the New England Chapter IASIU. He is a regular contributor to SIU Today and the AFA newsletter, where he discusses practical online techniques investigators can use in their day to day investigations. You are encouraged to connect with Joe via LinkedIn, and as always, never hesitate to reach out to him with questions you may have.

Digital Intelligence – The Art of Online Research

Searching online for open source intelligence (OSINT) has become a true art nowadays, and time consuming. Things are running great and then suddenly, Facebook makes major changes and you can't find what you want anymore. You are tired of looking at a million plus Google results, and you aren't sure what platform you should be searching anyway. Worse, you aren't sure what to do after you find that critical evidence. This class is intended to help you navigate through the online research process by reviewing some of the best techniques (and fastest ways) to uncover information online and how to best secure it once you have.

We will discuss the recent changes with Facebook, Instagram and Twitter and what third party sites you can use to pull hidden data and help develop leads. You will delve into mobile data, location services, and mobile apps like TikTok, Twitch & Vero. From using refined Boolean searches on Google, Twitter and yes, even Facebook to discussing how to create a solid digital chain of evidence. So, join me as I show you how to optimize your online research, manipulate some websites, find data on mobile only sites, and even scour the Dark Web. I promise that not only will this class be entertaining, but I guarantee that you will be introduced to techniques that will save you time.
